

Feline full body

Item No. VP12000

Feline full body

This specimen is a complete dissection of a cat, prepared to provide two complementary perspectives of the body. On one side, a dissection of the head, neck, thoracic cavity, abdominal cavity and pelvic cavity. This view offers an integrated representation of the topography of numerous organs and major anatomical structures, displayed within the body as a whole. On the opposite side, a superficial dissection of the musculature which provides a valuable functional overview of the locomotory apparatus, particularly the continuity between the trunk and the thoracic and pelvic limbs.
